Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System Names Interim Library Director Gayle Hunter Holloman

Atlanta – The Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System announces that Gayle Hunter Holloman has been named Interim Director, Library, Arts and Culture. Prior to this, she served as Branch Group Manager/Youth Services Coordinator for the Library System. In that capacity she provided leadership, management and direction to the 32 branches.

Holloman was involved in the opening of previous new libraries for the Library System, and continues to be integrally involved with the planning and opening of all of libraries in the current Library Building Program.

She began her career at Atlanta-Fulton Public Library System in 1994 as Library Associate and was promoted to Librarian in 1995. She has worked throughout the Library System as a Children’s Librarian, Young Adult Librarian, Branch Manager, Reference Department Manager, and as Central Library Administrator.

Before joining the Library System, Holloman worked at the Architecture Library of the Georgia Institute of Technology and at the DeKalb County Public Library. Prior to library service, she was an agent with the Allstate Insurance Company.

Holloman is an Atlanta native. She received a Bachelor’s Degree in Journalism from Georgia State University and a Master of Library and Information Studies degree from Clark Atlanta University. She and her husband have one son.
